

CSIR BURSARY PROGRAMME 2018

PEOPLE BEHIND IDEAS THAT WORK

Call for Applications

A world without science is unimaginable. Science aids development and organisations such as the CSIR play a very big role in ensuring that the world, especially Africa, continues to change for the better. Armed with some of the best minds in the world, the CSIR works on solving problems that can help all South Africans.

The CSIR hereby invites bursary applications from talented young people wishing to pursue a career in research, technology development and innovation. The CSIR Bursary Programme is open to academically qualifying young people and also aims to attract and increase the participation of women and Africans in fields of science, engineering and technology, specifically in the areas of:

Electronic engineering | Computer engineering | Software engineering | Civil engineering

If you are a South African citizen currently pursuing an engineering degree at a South African public university or you are a Grade 12 learner aiming to study towards a degree in engineering in 2018, we urge you to apply.

This is a comprehensive bursary that covers all the costs associated with university studies, such as:
